

There are currently no reports from an Undergraduate Informatics Representative from the past couple of years. However, according to the Constitution of the Dalhousie Computer Science Society:

- To keep the undergraduates of the Faculty of Computer Science informed of the issues discussed during the Council meetings;
- To make known to the Council any complaints, comments, suggestions, or ideas that the students they represent may have;
- To encourage class morale and participation in social events;
- To ensure alternate representation of their class in their absence; and
- To attend functions that the Council may be involved in.

I was able to attend one council meeting on September 17th, 2009, but due to a majority vote the meeting time was changed from 5:30pm to 4:00pm. This created a schedule conflict for me (I had class at 4:05pm on Thursdays), resulting in my lack of attendance (with regrets) at council meetings. Because of this I was not able to keep the Informatics students as informed as I would have liked, with issues the Council discussed at meetings.

I periodically sent out emails to all Informatics students that contained issues discussed and other information, such as event promotions, etc. However, because of my inability to attend Council meetings, these emails became less and less frequent during the term.

I promoted attendance for events such as Ultimate Frisbee, Geekbeer and Snowball that got the attention and interest from some Informatics students but you cannot always get all of them. I attended as many functions as possible and could attend as well as volunteering to help when I could.

I joined the Snowball 2009 committee this term and attended the meetings, helped with the inventing of the amusing awards, promoted student voting on them and also helped create the trophies for these awards. I also helped write a small portion of the Snowball 2009 script as well as promoted and sold tickets to Informatics students.
